

My First Week at Walton

By Kaiden

Before you read this, I just thought I would let you know that I came to Walton a little later than everyone else. In fact, I didn't start until nearly Christmas. I, like you, did not meet my teachers beforehand and felt like I had missed out on so much.

When I first arrived at my awesome new school, I met a boy that showed me around the school and I got my locker and my card. The first thing he asked me was if I had an Xbox, I said yes and we added each other as friends. We then talked about where I had moved from and where we both lived but that's when the bell went so we had to get to class. I really enjoyed my first day, it went so quickly and I learnt lots just in those few hours.

During the next day, I hung around with the friends I had made so that I didn't get lost and I also got their phone numbers. I played football at break and lunch and then went to my next class. My English teacher is great. She makes the lessons really fun.

On Wednesday, I got lost for the first time. This wasn't a major issue, but it has made me super organised now. If I don't know where a classroom is I either ask my friends or ask a teacher beforehand. However, the day wasn't all bad, I received my first achievement point and I went to Table Tennis club after school.

The day after that, I had Computer Science which is one of my favourite lessons. I played more football and hung around with my friends. I went on a trip to the pantomime to watch Cinderella with most of the year sevens. I ate lots of chocolate and got back to school at about half past six. It was a great trip, it got us all in the festive spirit and I recommend you all signing up for it this year.

To finish my first week, I had my favourite lesson PE and it was a double lesson as well which meant we had more time doing the practical lesson rather than stopping after a single lesson. We then had a Y7 disco to mark the end of term. It was so much fun although not many of us did much dancing. We did enjoy the refreshments though!

I enjoyed my first week at Walton and I love it there. When you go to Walton you will not be alone. There are many wonderful teachers that will help you and you will get to meet old friends and make new friends. You will not be disappointed by the brilliant food and the amazing lessons.
