

My First Week at Walton

By Mia

When I first started at Walton, it felt huge as I was new and didn't really know where all the classrooms were. I was so scared that I would walk into the wrong classroom, but I knew there were teachers all around to help/guide you to where you need to be, (the thing with that was I always got embarrassed and too scared to ask!). Break time for me was the awkward part as I just started and had no friends, but when I walked around a bit I saw this girl who looked so kind and I asked her if I could hang out with her and ever since then we have become best friends. Then the bell went so me, and Abigail stuck together and found where we should be, but when we got in, they had a seating plan. This is where they put you next to someone new or next to someone, they think you work very well with; well in this case, it was so everyone could get to know each other. I got seated next to this girl, who I thought I would never become friends with but suddenly we did. It was quite awkward as we only started talking because she saw I spelt a word wrong and she felt brave enough to mention it to me. Ever since then I've found my way around as I have stuck with them plus, we have a big group/gang now. So, it is not as bad as you think and if you're scared and don't know where to go, then don't be too afraid to ask, because everyone is lovely and will be willing to help you. Soon enough you will have a big group of friends and will know where to go all the time.
